Having a Food Plan Alongside Working the Steps

By Kat T.

I came into OA in 2013 with a deep desire to stop bingeing and purging. Even when I didn't want to I couldn't stop bingeing. I purged and exercised to get rid of excess calories. I felt scared, alone, depressed and like no one understood me. When I entered the rooms of OA I slowly began to understand the solution to my addiction. In the beginning I thought I could still eat sugary desserts, candy and various other salty high fat junk food. Now I know I cannot eat these binge foods without setting off a physical craving, and that it is nearly impossible to stop myself from bingeing on these foods again. Today, I abstain from the foods I find addictive. A food plan alongside working the steps is a solution to my food addiction.

For a year and a half I couldn't grasp how to get and stay abstinent. The food plan was something that I either didn't believe in or just never heard; it was in one ear and out the other. At one point, a fellow member introduced me to a weighed and measured food plan. I felt I found the key to the ever-illusory abstinence. I did get abstinent for a period of time, but I could not keep it. In the 3 years I have been in OA I have relapsed multiple times. However I never gave up on OA. A few things contributed to relapse—not going to face to face meetings, fighting against suggestions given to me, and holding in my emotions. I knew in my heart that the 12 steps had something to offer. It worked for the alcoholics so it must work for me.

Today I am abstinent because I have a food plan and I work the steps with my sponsor. I have a nutritionist who understands food addiction and eating disorders and who has created a food plan for me. I go to meetings in OA and other fellowships where I receive a spiritual solution to my disease of addiction. I need to network and talk with other addicts. I have a sponsor who I can be completely honest with about my life and who gives me honest feedback. Recovery is a way of life and it comes first. The obsession with food and bingeing has been a symbol for what is going on inside of me. Just for today I am able to work a program of recovery and stay abstinent one day at a time.

The Lights Were On, But Nobody Was Home

By Annie D.

The lights were on, but nobody was home. This is the way I felt when I came to OA for the first time in the walls of a treatment center. It was September 2013. I wondered where this had all begun. At age 8, I recall skipping lunch because it made me “feel better”. I began being bullied regarding my clothes not fitting properly. That's the first time I remember feeling like my body was different than others.

Fast forward a few years of body obsession and not doing anything about it, I got confronted by someone because she thought I was purging when I was in the bathroom for long periods of time. The truth is, I would stand in the bathroom and look at my body with all its imperfections. I had been binge eating without purging or restricting and was beginning to not like the way my body looked.

In 2012, a tragic event happened in my family and I took a plunge into the dangerous world of anorexia. I restricted my intake and exercised off every bite I took in. After only a few months, I was having a difficult time staying warm and keeping up my energy. Fast forward a year and I had a hard time sitting or finding a comfortable position because I was at a low body weight.

I met an angel on social media who suggested I seek help. I now look back and see this woman was placed in my life as an act of my Higher Power, whom I choose to call God. I was given the option of treatment or divorce. I chose treatment.

Having to eat full meals again was difficult. I expressed this to my sponsor, who I obtained at my first OA meeting. Following treatment, I did not stay abstinent. I relapsed over and over again before finally reaching my bottom. I stopped eating and was hiding it from my mother who was visiting me. I felt defeated and powerless.

“OA gave me my life back and then some. The way I repay that today is by continuing to show up and give away what was so freely given to me.”

-Annie D.

I picked up my last white chip on February 2, 2014. I have worked the steps, have a sponsor, and sponsor women. Living a life in recovery has truly given me a life beyond my wildest dreams. Although it has not been a walk in the park, I appreciate every obstacle and growing opportunity God has placed in my path. Recovery has shown me I can walk through anything as long as I seek God, clean house, and help others. Today, I do not have to eat, restrict, over-exercise or anything of the sort to avoid what I'm feeling. I walk through and come out stronger on the other side.

OA gave me my life back and then some. The way I repay that today is by continuing to show up and give away what was so freely given to me. Today, I can have true serenity. Thank God.
